SWEET SUDAN INSURANCE AGAINST SUMMER DROUTH

If a field of sweet sudan grass is available during the hot dry periods of July and August, it's one of the best types of insurance against the seasonal summer slump in milk production.

M. F. Ellmore, associate dairy husbandman at VPI, echoing suggestions from agronomists at the college, says that sudan is available when other pastures are either dormant or retarded during mid-summer. It comes back quickly after being grazed or mowed, and is particularly adapted to rotational grazing. If the season is favorable, and sudan is not needed for pasture, it can be made into a satisfactory silage that does not need a preservative.

With average soil fertility and weather, a yield of two tons of hay, or equivalent, per acre can be expected. Under a system of rotational grazing during a 60-day period, this will provide enough TDN (total digestible nutrients) to keep three 1,000-pound dairy cows producing about 10 pounds of 4% milk per cow each day. Since sudan grass is relatively low in protein, it will be necessary to supplement sudan pasture with a protein for a balanced ration. Use about one pound of 20% concentrate for each 5 to 6 pounds of milk.

The average improved herd of 45 cows might expect to get enough nutrients from 15 acres of sudan grass to maintain their body weight and produce 27,000 pounds of milk. A farmer may expect to spend $450, or $30 an acre, to produce 15 acres of sudan grass which would yield 2 tons of hay, or its equivalent, per acre. The feed cost per 100 pounds of milk produced would be $1.66.

To put it another way, Ellmore points out that if the sudan grass were not available, you might expect the same results from two tons of good hay or six tons of good silage. If you had to buy the hay at, say, $30 per ton, you'd need $900 worth of hay to do the same job at a feed cost of $3.32 per 100 pounds of milk.

TRAFFIC RECORDS

Figures from the 24 states participating in the 1954 summertime highway safety campaign, Slow Down and Live, show a reduction of 16 per cent in traffic deaths for the Memorial Day week-end as compared with the same holiday last year.

Highway deaths in the region, which includes every state from Maine to Texas, totaled 165 this year. Last year's figure was 196.

The reduction, according to Captain C. E. Taylor, of Florida, chairman of the Southern State Safety Coordinators group, and Paul E. Burke, of Maryland, chairman of the Northeastern State Safety Coordinators, came in the face of a near-record death toll for the nation as a whole. The coordinators also pointed out that this Memorial Day week-end covered a full three days. Last year's was listed officially as a two-day holiday.

Fourteen of the participating states showed decreases in the number of deaths this year. They were Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Rhode Island.

Two states, Georgia and New Hampshire, held even with the toll of a year ago while the eight states of Kentucky, Louisiana, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Vermont reported increases.

In announcing the holiday figures, Captain Taylor and Mr. Burke said, "This is an auspicious start for our 1954 Slow Down and Live project. State, county and local officials in the area from Maine to Texas will redouble their efforts to continue this trend throughout the summer vacation period."

GROUP INSURANCE COVERS MILLIONS OF U. S. FAMILIES

Group insurance in the United States is now a part of the family protection program of a large share of the nation's families, according to the Life Insurance Association of America's annual survey of group coverage written by all types of insurance companies, life, casualty, and accident and health.

"The greater part of today's bulwark of group insurance has been purchased in the years since the end of World War II," the Association said, in commenting on its survey results. "The over-all group insurance premiums have more than tripled in these eight years, while premiums for the group accident and health coverages combined have increased nearly six-fold."

The most widely held of the various group coverages at the start of this year were group hospital expense and group surgical expense protection, both of which covered nearly 34,000,000 persons. These two coverages also showed the greatest growth during the past year.

With 4,400,000 additional persons brought under the insurance companies' group surgical expense coverage in 1953, the total coverage rose of 33,976,000, under 71,910-master contracts.

Group hospital expense insurance with the insurance companies saw 4,101,000 added in 1953 and at the start of this year covered 33,510,000 employees and dependents, under 69,990 master contracts.

Group medical expense insurance also grew rapidly in the past year, the 3,615,000 added bringing the total covered to 13,730,000.

Newest member of this protection family, group major-medical expense coverage, added 510,000 persons in the year and covered 1,042,000 at the turn of the year, under 650 master contracts. This coverage which protects against catastrophic medical expenses has had the most rapid rate of growth of all group insurance plans, practically doubling in the single year.

Group accident and health weekly indemnity insurance covered 18,739,000 on January 1, under 217,500 master contracts.

Aggregate premiums paid to insurance companies [illegible] workers and employers [illegible] coverages of all kinds [illegible] 000,000,000 for the [illegible] 1953. The actual figure [illegible] 700,000 was $42[illegible] the year before [illegible] 000,000,000 more than

Take advantage of the 'artmobile' when it comes to your county.

That's the advice from Miss Catherine Peery, rural arts specialist at VPI. She explains that the artmobile was launched last year by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, and will be two years in covering the state. It stays in one place from two to three days. Women's club members, school children, and other organized groups attending will be admitted free.

A recorded discussion of the 19 early paintings of the Netherlands will be given at intervals, and there is a special recording for children.

Find out when it is due in your county and make plans to see it. Instruct your group not to rush but to linger for more than one recording.

* * *

Do people in rural areas read?

Miss Catherine Peery, rural arts specialist at VPI, reporting on a poll made recently by the Ohio Farm Bureau, said 42% of the farmers said they read fiction; 16% biographies; 28% historical novels, and 12% poetry.

What books do rural folks want? That's a question for much discussion, according to Miss Peery. Answers depend on education, reading habits, and environment of the reader. Some authorities say "How-To-Do-It" books are taking the lead. Gladys Hasty Carroll, an author of South Berwick, Maine, says rural people want "non-fiction which is clear, vital, and inspirational. They want to know more about the American past they believe in; and more about whatever part they can play in building a fellowship of nations. They want readable biographies of people they can respect and admire, whether the subjects are famous or just good citizens."

N. E. A. GROUP ON TOUR OF OLD DOMINION

Richmond, Va.- More than 300 newspaper publishers and their wives representing all sections of the country are enjoying true Virginia hospitality this week as guests of Virginia newspapers, agencies and organizations.

Members of the National Editorial Association on post-convention tour of the several places of historic interest in Tidewater Virginia entertained President Eisenhower at dinner in Washington on Tuesday. On Wednesday they traveled by bus caravan to Fredericksburg, where they were greeted by members of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce and enjoyed tea and cakes in the kitchen of Kenmore as guests of the Kenmore Ladies' Association.

A visit to Mariner's Museum and an all-day visit to Colonial Williamsburg occupied most of the hours Thursday. A cruise of the Hampton Roads area aboard a Virginia Highway Commission ferryboat will include buffet supper with The Virginia State Ports Authority, the Virginia Pilots Association and the Norfolk Port Authority as hosts.

The visiting editors will travel up the Eastern Shore of Virginia on Friday morning where they will be entertained at a picnic luncheon by members of the Eastern Shore Chamber of Commerce. The Virginia portion of the N. E. A. tour will be directed by Robert F. Nelson and the staff of the Virginia Travel Council.

ALLEGED DEPREDATIONS OF BEARS IN BATH CO.

Due to the alleged depredations by bears in Bath County, an livestock, chiefly sheep, the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries is in receipt of a resolution by the County Board of Supervisors requesting that a season be approved immediately for the purpose of reducing the bear population and consequent reduction of the depredation by the bears.

The Commission now has biologists and law enforcement personnel in the county making a study. According to Webb Midyette, chief of the Law Enforcement Division, many sheep depredations turn out to be the work of roving dogs.

WORK PROGRESSING ON COMMISSION PONDS

According to G. W. Juller, chief of the Fish Division of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, work is progressing satisfactorily on the Brunswick County public fishing pond which the Commission is constructing in that county. This is another of the eight public fishing ponds which the Commission authorized last year for construction in areas far removed from public fishing waters.

Work has already started on a similar project near New Baltimore in Fauquier County.

A ceremony is being held at 1:00 P. M. today at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, to transfer funds for the purchase of the Guillaume Painting of the Surrender Scene at Appomattox April 9, 1865. The sum of $1,250 was contributed here and in Lynchburg, to purchase the famed painting for Appomattox from the University of Richigan. The painting has been on exhibit at the Randolph-Macon Art Gallery for several weeks.

The painting will be brought to Appomattox and placed on exhibit in the restored Tavern at Old Appomattox Court House. A date of July 1 has been set for having the painting on exhibit here.

At today's ceremony, check in payment for the painting will be presented to Mr. Elbert Cox, Regional Director of the National Park Service. The check will be presented by Mr. James R. Gilliam, Jr., treasurer of the purchase fund.

$392.40 of the $1,250 was raised in Appomattox.

Present for the ceremony today were representatives of civic clubs and the following: From the National Park Service: Paul Hudson, Museum Specialist, Region One; H. A. Gurney, Superintendent, Appomattox C. H. National Historical Park; James Hubbard, Historian, Region One, National Park Service.

The Park Service group met here at 10 A. M. for the purpose of selecting a spot in the Restored Tavern for the placing of the Guillaume painting.

The painting depicts the scene in the parlor of the home of Wilmer McLean on April 9, 1865, when Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered the Army of Northern Virginia to Gen. U. S. Grant.

TRACTOR DRIVERS IN STATE FAIR CONTEST

Richmond, Sixteen carefully selected young tractor drivers, representing as many states, will vie for national honors here as a feature of the 1954 State Fair of Virginia, Admiral R. O. Glover, the Executive Vice-President said today.

Winners in state elimination contests will compete in the Atlantic States 4-H Tractor Operators Contest, the largest event of its kind in the United States on Tuesday, September 28, during "Junior Day" at the State Fair. The contestants will operate tractors of their choice over specially constructed obstacle courses to test their proficiency in driving. They will also be scored on a written and practical examination on tractor maintenance and safe operation including belting and implement operation. A championship trophy and cash awards go to the winner.

Organization and supervision of the contest is by the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service, under direction of W. A. Turner, Associate 4-H Club Agent.
